

Chronic exposure to arsenic (As) via drinking water is related to several health effects, i.e. cancers, diabetes, respiratory and cardiovascular diseases. Health effects are well documented for population exposed to high levels and some studies also report evidence for low-medium levels (50-100 µg/L). In response, an EC Directive set a limit of As